200,000 ACRES LAND PUT UNDER WATER THIS DAY

ELEPHANT BUTTE DAM FORMALY DEDICATED

Land to be Covered by Water From Dam Extends Over New Mexico, Texas and Old Mexico—Elephant Butte Dam Forms Largest Irrigation Reservoir in the World, and is Made of Concrete and Steel.

United Press Service

ELEPHANT BUTTE, N. M., Oct. 19.—When the golden key which started the waters of the Rio Grande flowing through the spillways of the great new Elephant Butte dam was turned today, 200,000 acres of fertile land in the chain of valleys in New Mexico, Texas and Old Mexico were added to our acreage. The dedicatory exercises were held here at the dam, about 125 miles up the river from El Paso and about 175 miles below Albuquerque, and marked the completion of the reclamation service's greatest project, one of the most pretensions of its kind in the history of the world.

The Elephant Butte dam is a mass of concrete and steel thrown across the Rio Grande River on the desert of New Mexico at the point where a great rock, shaped like a mastodontic elephant, seems to drink from the Rio Grande. This giant impounding dam has formed the largest irrigation reservoir in the world. More than forty-five miles in length and eight miles across, the lake stores the melted snows of the Colorado and New Mexican mountain ranges, and these waters are allowed to flow through the spillways of the dam when the land needs moisture.

At the conclusion of the elaborate dedicatory exercises, the first session of the twenty-third international irrigation congress was held at the dam.

"The dedication of Elephant Butte dam today is an event of world wide importance, said James G. McNary, chairman of the board of control of the irrigation congress. "It will justify the faith of the people of the Southwest, who have staked their all on the fertility of the soil and the ability of the project to carry waters to the lands when most needed. It will reward the pioneer men and women of the lower Rio Grande valleys from Albuquerque to Old Mexico."

And this reveals a deep wrinkle, deepened today by the fatigues of his labors as a campaigner. His eyes are a little hollowed by the physical and mental efforts of addressing audiences. These elements of fatigue, however, are offset by a healthy sunburn on his cheeks and a sparkle of enthusiasm in his eye.

"Do you think Osborne was asked, that Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, who confessed to murdering his wife's parents, is a good man? Or is he bad, inherently criminal and vicious?" "I think Dr. Waite is insane," said the warden. "Not violently insane, but excessively abnormal. He has control over his mental processes, but his mind is so warped and distorted that his murdering his father-in-law and mother-in-law by poison is not surprising.
